SUMMARY

The slower sales experienced in May counterbalanced the gains observed earlier in the year, leading to a four per cent decline in year-to-date sales. This downturn in sales coincided with an increase in new listings, resulting in a rise in inventory levels and causing the months-of-supply to climb to nearly three months. Although the months of supply increased across all property types, the most affordable properties within each category continue to face the tightest conditions.

Benchmark prices in May continued to rise compared to earlier in the year but remained just over one per cent lower than the levels recorded in May of the previous year. Despite some monthly fluctuations, year-to-date prices have shown relative stability in 2024 compared to the previous year.

PROPERTY TYPES

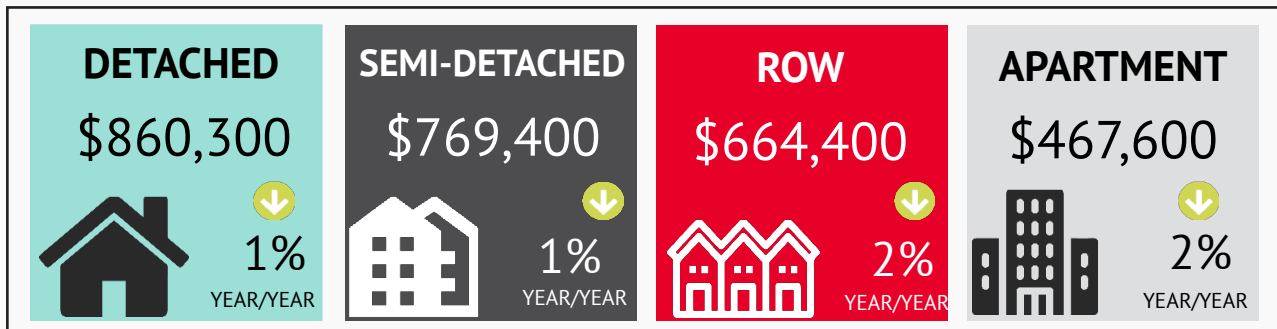

Sales declined across all property types in May, with the most significant declines observed in higher-density homes. Conversely, new listings increased for all property types, contributing to the decline in sales-to-new-listings ratios and the subsequent rise in inventory levels. The sales-to-new-listings ratio ranged from a high of 50 per cent for semi-detached homes to a low of 36 per cent for apartment-style units.

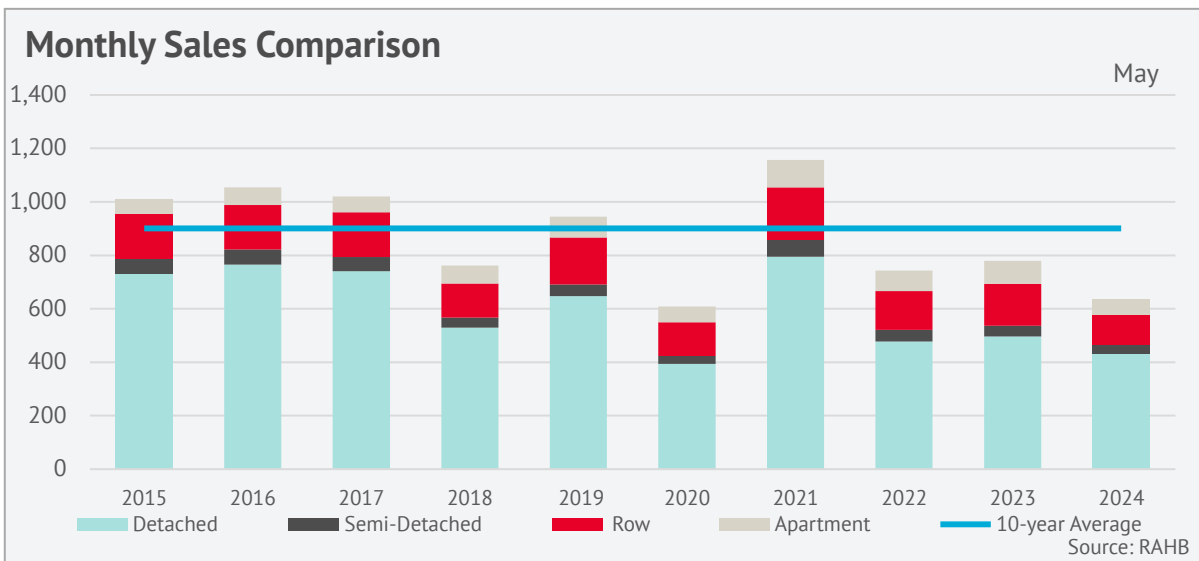

The increased supply relative to sales helped alleviate some pressure on home prices, particularly in the upper price ranges. So far this year, average benchmark prices have shown modest improvements for detached and semi-detached homes, while reporting a two per cent decline for apartment-style units.

REGIONAL SUMMARY

Within Hamilton, the most notable decline in year-to-date sales was observed in Hamilton West. However, when expanding the scope to the broader Hamilton region, only Flamborough and Dundas reported a significant increase in sales compared to the previous year. Despite variations in sales activity, all locations within the region experienced an uptick in inventory levels and months of supply.

Dundas, Hamilton Mountain, and Hamilton East reported the tightest market conditions with just over two months-of-supply; on the other hand, Flamborough reported a months-of-supply of over five months.
